

Renaissance and Early Modern Studies

Overview

The Designated Emphasis (DE) in Renaissance and Early Modern Studies draws on Berkeley's exceptional faculty strength in Arts, Humanities, and Social Sciences to foster interdisciplinary research on the Renaissance and Early Modern period and to provide an intellectual community for those working in these areas. It offers comprehensive training in a wide range of departments and disciplines. Students combine seminar work in intellectual and cultural history, material culture, and languages to supplement their traditional doctoral studies. The DE fosters cutting-edge research and close collaboration with faculty.

Undergraduate Program

There is no undergraduate program in Renaissance and Early Modern Studies.

Graduate Program

Renaissance and Early Modern Studies (<http://guide.berkeley.edu/archive/2015-16/graduate/degree-programs/renaissance-early-modern>) : Designated Emphasis (DE)