

Berkeley Study Abroad

From Santiago to Singapore, Berkeley offers a broad spectrum of opportunities that inspire students to think globally by living in other cultures while progressing toward their bachelors' degrees. Berkeley Study Abroad (BSA) offers a diverse array of programs across all the major disciplines in more than 40 countries. Students can enhance their undergraduate experience and gain valuable international relations skills while receiving University credit for their participation. Options include semester, year, and summer programs.

Many programs do not require foreign language proficiency. Financial Aid recipients qualify for financial aid assistance while abroad on BSA programs, and scholarships are available for eligible BSA students.

For further information, contact Berkeley Study Abroad at 160 Stephens Hall, 510-642-1356, or see the Berkeley Study Abroad (<http://studyabroad.berkeley.edu>) website.

Berkeley Abroad offers a range of opportunities for students to experience other cultures while progressing toward their bachelors' degrees.

UC Berkeley Summer Abroad offers intensive summer programs combined with excursions and local activities built around Berkeley courses and led by Berkeley faculty. Find out about available countries, program options, and deadlines . (<http://studyabroad.berkeley.edu/summerabroad>)

The UC Berkeley Global Internships program matches students with experiential learning opportunities in a variety of countries around the world and in the San Francisco Bay Area.
