CHICANO 152 The History of Latina/o Studies 4 Units

Terms offered: Spring 2016

Latinas/os have long been the object of intellectual thought: they have been written about, they have been studied and quantified, and quite often not in positive terms. In this course, we will turn Latinas/os from objects of discourse to subjects of discourse, as active participants in intellectual thought. Our goal will be to explore how Latinas/os have reflected critically upon and written about their position as Latinas/os within the United States. In doing so, we will counter the general notion that Latina/o intellectual thought is, at best, a recent phenomenon or, at worst, non-existent.

Objectives & Outcomes

Course Objectives: To explore recurring themes and debates among Latina/o intellectuals and academics.

To historicize the emergence of Latina/o studies and to explore their divergences and convergences.

To provide a framework for understanding the field of Latina/o studies.

Hours & Format
